Racewalking, or race walking, is a long-distance discipline within the sport of athletics. Although it is a foot race, it is different from running in that one foot must appear to be in contact with the ground at all times. This is assessed by race judges. Typically held on either roads or on running tracks, common distances vary from 3000 metres (1.8 mi) up to 100 kilometres (62.1 mi).

Training: Training to walk across America can be as daunting as the walk itself. When I first began my training after graduation, I was unprepared for the boredom, soreness, and occasional injury I experienced. I'd kept in shape in college by running every morning and walking to classes; however, I still needed to up the ante on my training.
